ClearCorrect launches ClearPilot platform

October 1, 2020

Article

ClearPilot is a digital design treatment tool for clinicians to track clear aligner cases.

Clear aligners manufacturer, ClearCorrect, is set to launch ClearPilot, a new digital treatment design tool that is designed to give providers visibility and control as they review and approve their ClearCorrect aligner cases.

The web-based platform is said to expand on the tools that providers can utilize to create personalized treatment plans for patients. ClearPilot features easy-to-access comments and technician notes, prescription details in one place for side-by-side comparison, treatment overview, movement table, superimposition, millimeter grids, and more.

"ClearPilot is an innovative advancement in ClearCorrect clear aligner treatment, offering enhanced convenience and tools that meet providers' needs," said Artem Borovinskikh, global head of Ortho Software Technology for Straumann Group Orthodontics, ClearCorrect's parent company. "We're proud to offer an enhanced web-based functionality that ensures our providers receive the latest updates without having to download or upgrade patches."

The platform was designed based on feedback from clinicians, and ClearCorrect is committed to continuing to improve the clinician experience by providing the tools they need to move their practices forward, a statement from the company read. For more information, visit clearcorrect.com/clearpilot.
